Faculty

Performance evaluations provide a mechanism for faculty to regularly reassess professional performance and use such assessment as a basis for improvement of instruction.

Performance evaluations of faculty shall be based primarily on four factors:

2. Scholarly/Creative Activities: including professional development; discovery/creative activities; dissemination
3. Service: including to the institution, profession, and the general public
4. Administration where applicable for academic leadership assignments

Specific graduate course work is required (see D.8.2.1) for most faculty who are working toward promotion. Research, especially pedagogical research and curriculum development, is also encouraged.

The –evaluation is aligned with the job description and shall be based on the following types of evidence: portfolio developed by faculty. The portfolio will be evaluated by peers and the department chair. Student surveys are part of the portfolio evaluation and shall be used primarily for the improvement of instruction.

College administrators shall use the performance evaluation to support improvement of instruction of all faculty and to make decisions on renewal of a Probationary faculty member and on promotion.

The Chancellor or designee shall ensure that guidelines for performance evaluations are implemented. Procedural guidelines involving staff and faculty evaluation, including the design of the evaluation model used in the process, shall be developed jointly by staff and faculty and the Human Resources department and submitted to the Chancellor for final approval.
